

HacktionLab

HacktionLab is UK tech-activist run network that creates regular convergence spaces where activists interested in the areas of alternative media, renewable energy, on-line video distribution, free software or any other form of activism that utilises technology can get together and plan how to harness the technology to support grass roots social movements.

People involved in HacktionLab are often involved with other media & tech projects such as ...

Aktivix, Be the Media, Bristol Wireless, Catalyst Radio, Dissident Island Radio, Indymedia, Network23, Tachanka, VisionOnTV, and many more.

Mailing list: <https://imc.li/9g2yp>

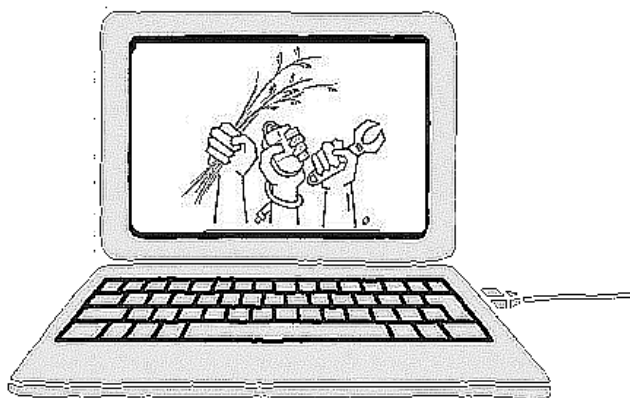

Web: <http://hacktivista.net/>

Tech Tools for Activists

If you ...

- need to organise activism and campaigns securely using your computer,
- want to find alternatives to using corporate internet and IT providers,
- value your privacy, and do not want to give it away to marketing companies, governments and other people you do not know,
- want to do the above without needing to be a geek or a techie,

... then this booklet is for you.

First edition sold out. Second edition due in Spring 2012. Check our site for updates and for links to the first edition online.

<http://hacktivist.net/>